

Will the Real Church Stand Up brings an important word to those who are passionate about hearing what the Spirit is saying to the churches in our day. With extraordinary insight, Michael Fewson clearly describes the faulty pathways that the churches of the old wineskin have been choosing. He then shines a light of hope for those who recognize the new apostolic wineskin that lays the biblical foundation for the church in a much more promising future.

C. Peter Wagner, Presiding Apostle
International Coalition of Apostles

What I appreciate most about Michael in the 5 years I've known him is his passion for God and his love for the truth. This book is thought provoking, timely, poignant, and I believe will serve as a wakeup call for every sincere reader. While Michael is a straight shooter he also has a tender heart—a man of steel and velvet.

There's much pressure today to dilute the message in order to attract more people to our churches, and the end result leaves much to be desired. Michael is not into that but is into making disciples of our Lord Jesus. I highly recommend this book without reservation.

Gary D Johnson
Senior pastor
Dove Christian Center
Rapid City, South Dakota

One of the greatest dangers in any ministry is to surround oneself with “yes” people, people who are dedicated to telling you what you want to hear in order to advance their own interests. The sin nature is self congratulatory and thrives when it hears that things are fine, powerful and growing.

To hear the message that the church that we all love and strive to see advanced is “poor, naked and wretched” will come as an unpleasant shock and bravely swims against the flood of popular titles in the market today. However, those that are objective, honest and courageous will welcome a message that challenges the status quo.

The words of the prophets throughout the ages have never been well received but have always been essential; I believe this book contains such a message.

Andrew Belbin
Assistant Store Manager
Koorong Books Australia

“What has been revealed to me through Apostle Michael’s teaching is this: The church of God needs apostles; men who are fathers in the faith; men who stand on, and build upon the rock, Jesus Christ. Not people who have simply attained leadership positions through their own personality or by the votes of men.

“After hearing Apostle Fewson speak, the Church in Tanzania has changed her spiritual standards and begun to realign herself with the will of God. I have listened to this man whose apostolic message is dynamic, challenging and truthful. For sure, this is what the church of today needs.”

Pastor Elibariki Mmbando
Senior Pastor
MORIAH HOUSE OF PRAYER
Tanzania, East Africa